CATHERINE KIRKWOOD
Artist

“I grew up on the East Coast, close to Long Island Sound. I spent my summers swimming and in the winter, I walked the beach for solitude and contemplation. This series of water paintings started in Santa Fe in the desert southwest, away from water. I am drawn to the quiet and “otherworldliness” of water, the sense of things hidden in the depths. I am visually fascinated by the different layers one sees when looking at water—the reflections of the sky, the movement on the surface and the abstraction of what is below the surface. Water lilies and koi add another dimension of color and form above and under the water.

I started working in oil paint when I was 12 years old, taking lessons from a friend’s mother in her basement studio. Many years later, I attended the School of Art at Syracuse University, the California College of the Arts and the University of New Mexico, receiving a B.F.A. and later an M.A. in painting. I have exhibited across the country and have won numerous awards. My work is included in several private collections and in the collections of AT&T, Chicago, IL, the Downey Museum of Art in Downey, California and the Luther Brady Collection at the Picker Art Gallery, Colgate University, Hamilton, N.Y.”
