ROBERT HOLMES
Artist

Robert Holmes has been exhibiting and selling his sculptures over the past twenty years in the United States, Europe, South America, and Asia. Holmes' work is represented in only a select few galleries. This artist has had numerous one-man, group and invitational shows in his lifetime. Many private and corporate collectors worldwide own and enjoy his art.

Robert obtained a Civil Engineering degree and had formal architectural training from the University of Arizona. Both disciplines are evident in the structural elements of his work.

Holmes maintains his primary residence at The Sea Ranch, on the rugged coast of Northern California. The artist has his studio and adjacent foundry, Bronze +, Inc. in Sebastopol, California, fifty miles north of San Francisco. There, he creates semi abstract cast bronze figures in limited editions, which range from table-size to larger-than-life.

Holmes has this to say about his work: "My work is my statement; I don't believe that words go very far in describing sculpture. I would rather let people see my work itself and interact with it in their own way."

Jayne McGuire, in her review of Holmes' work for The Del Mar Sculpture Garden in Del Mar, California, states, 'Holmes' contemporary figurative work, especially his life giving female figure, expresses a nurturing, universal quality which celebrates the joy of being, the joy of movement, and our basic human need for 'connectedness'. A consistent vitality is present in all of Holmes' figures, evident in the graceful movement of his dancers and runners, and in the solitary stillness of his reclining and seated figures. "
